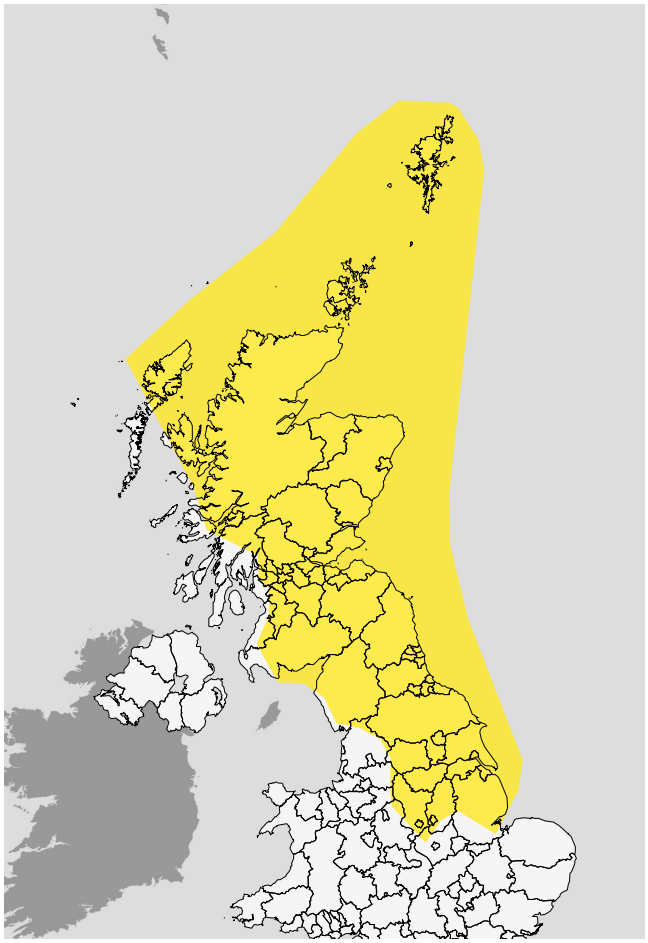
Yellow warning
Snow & Ice

Between
17:00 Sat 27 Nov 2021 and
11:00 Sun 28 Nov 2021



Wintry showers causing icy stretches. Snow showers becoming more extensive over parts of Scotland and northwest England early Sunday.

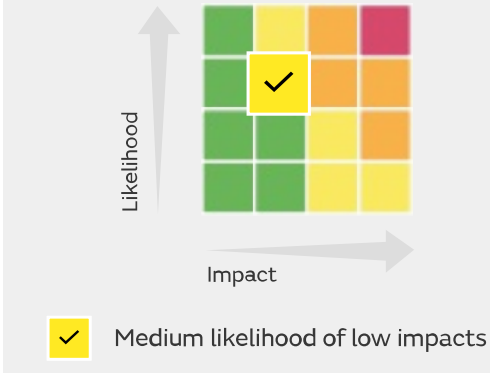
What to expect

- Some injuries from slips and falls on icy surfaces
- Probably some icy patches on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths
- Some roads and railways may be affected with longer journey times by road, bus and train services

Further details

Wintry showers will continue into Sunday around northern and eastern Scotland and the eastern side of England. These showers will fall as snow on hills and a mix of rain, sleet and snow to lower levels. Further small snow accumulations are possible. These showers, as well as existing lying snow, will cause also icy stretches.

Meanwhile, during the early hours of Sunday and Sunday morning some more widespread snow will move southwards across Scotland into northwest England. This snow will probably only last for an hour or two, but is likely to produce further, small accumulations of snow.



✓ Medium likelihood of low impacts
